

Location: Turin, Italy -- A northern Italian city known for its architecture and is the home to the Shroud of Turin.

Product Purchased: GeoBlue Voyager Choice

Medical Situation: Injuries sustained from a fall down a flight of steps

Diagnosis: Femur fracture

Action: 80 year-old Geo-Blue member fractured her femur while in her hotel in Turin. After the fall she was rushed immediately to a public non-contracted hospital. The member's family contacted Geo-Blue, who made payment arrangements with the facility so the member would not have any out-of-pocket expenses.

Outcome: The member underwent emergency surgery. After commencing an inpatient physical therapy regimen, the member regained some mobility. GeoBlue's medical team spoke daily with the hospital staff to monitor the member's progress. Due to the member's slow recovery, she was hospitalized for nearly three weeks. Once she was declared fit to fly, a plan was developed for her return to the U.S.

The member's husband had his own medical problems which prohibited him from assisting his wife during the flight. As a result, the doctors required the member to travel in first class seating accompanied by a nurse escort. The escort was arranged and the member arrived safely back home.
